

The Box

He was in the station waiting for the train. Unexpectedly he saw a man running with a box and the man went next to him and said —take this box and protect it— he gave him the Box and finally said —They mustn't get the Box—and the man ran away. He didn't know what to do so he took the train home.

When he arrived he started to check the Box. First he tried to open it but it didn't have any lock or lid, its 6 faces were flat and they didn't have anything written. Later he shook the Box, but he didn't hear anything.

He remembered that he had an old friend that maybe could help him to open the Box but he didn't know his phone number so he left the mobile phone charging. He took his car, he put the Box next to him and he drove to his friend's house.

A few minutes later he was driving and he stopped because of a red traffic light and when he was waiting in the car he realised that a man that was wearing a suit was crossing the road and was observing the Box but the man in the suit saw him and he went away crossing the street.

He continued driving when he saw the man in a suit driving a black car behind him. After that the this man started to speed up and it seemed that the he was trying to pass him. So he also sped up but his chaser didn't follow the traffic rules so he reached him and he opened the car window. He waited a moment and he opened it. Firstly, he thought "he looks like one of the men in "Men in Black". Then, the man said something in Russian and he took a gun from his jacket. Frightened, he sped up and he saw the black car following him. He searched for his mobile phone but he realised that he had left it at home so he continued driving and in a very busy railway he lost sight of his follower.

He decided to go home and think there. He went home without anything unusual and at home he made a decision —if I phone the police probably I'll have to go to a judge and I'm going to waste a lot of time and if I throw the box to the bin and it is something important they can arrest me, so the best thing I can do is to give it to someone—. So finally, he did the same thing they did to him. He drove to the station and there he saw a woman with her mobile phone and he said —take this box and protect it— he gave her the Box and he continued with his life. THE END
